THE 1CT ARCTIC WINTER was on them in earnest, . Their house was was on them in carnest. Their house was finished about a week after the Profeus left. It was named in honor of Senator Conger "Fort Conger." During the first mouth the cold affected the uner more than at any subsequent time at Fort Conger. Later on, in December, the temperature sank from 50 to 65 degrees below zero, and so remained for days at a time; but even in that weather the cock's favorite amusement. that weather the cook's favorite amusement was dancing bareheaded, barearmed, and with slippered feet on the top of a snow-drift. During the day the men dressed in ordinary outside clothing, but their flunnels were very heavy. Five of the men were engencially or a part of the day engaged in scientific work under Lieutenant Greef's direction, and in the duttes of the camp the rest of the men were employed generally about one hour a day, and devoted the remander of the time to particularly about one hour a day, and devoted the remander of the time to particularly about one hour a day, and devoted the remander of the time to provide the party removed is Cape show, the average heat maintained being fifty degrees above zero. Plajng checkers, cards, and chess, and redaing were the annuscements of the evening. The life was said by Lleutenant Greely to be far from a lonely one, and many of the mensad they had never passed two happier years that those spent at Fort Conger. On the light of October the sun left them for 156 days, and a twilight, varying from half and hour to iwenty-four hours, succeeded. For two months it was so dim that the dial of a watch could not be read by it. On April 11th the sun came down above the horizon and remained there 185 days, giving the party agrees sufficiency of indight and the Great Rear being the brightest. Five of the men were generally for a part of the day en-gaged in scientific work under Lieutenant orion's Bell and the Great Read to down from almost overhead. Standing alone outside the fort on one of these nights the secne was weirdly grand. To the north flamed the aurora borealis and the bright constellations were set, like lewels, around the glowing moon. Over everything was dead silence, so horribly oppressive that a man alone is almost tempted to kill himself, so lonely does he feel. The astronomer of the party said that with the naked eye a star of one degree smaller magnitude than can be seen here in the same way might be discerned. The moon would remain in sight for from eleven to twelve days at a time. Thermometer registered on June 30, 1882, the highest temperature at Lady Franklin bay, which we knew during our stay. It was 52 degrees below zero. The towest was in February, 1883, and was 66 degrees below zero. Here it was Dr. Hayes claimed to have seen his open Polar sea. In the trip of 1882 Lockwood resched the highest latitude ever reached—83° 25′ N. This was about 300 miles directly north of Lady Franklin bay, but to get there he travelled over 1,000 miles, the open water and broken packs frequently causing him to retrace his steps fifty miles. Lockwood sounded the sea both years between Cape Bryant and Cape Britannis, but could not touch bottom with 135 fathoms of line. Markham, a few years before, about 100 miles to the west, got bottom at seventy-two fathoms. Lockwood found at his farthest north about the same vegetation as at Lady Franklin bay, but no adgus of a Poiar current or open Polar sea. In 1883 he was stopped near Cape Bryant, 125 miles from Lady Franklin bay, but no orthogonal current or open Polar sea. Eventually a heavy northwest gale drove them by Cape Sabine within a mile of Brevoort Island, but they could not land. On September 22d there arose the most terrific gale they had yet seen on the Arctic ocean. Their ice-fice was driven hither and thither by the tempest, and the waves washed over had yet seen on the Arctic ocean. Their ice-floe was driven hither and thither by the tempest, and the waves washed over them again and again, the spray freezing to them, and causing them intense suffering. Night came on—one of inky blackness. The wind threw the heavy floes together, and crash after crash of ice, breaking from their own floe, warned the men that death was near to them. No man knew at what minute the floe maght break up and engulf them. The first faint light of dawn showed them that little remained of the floe upon which they were. The sea washed another close to them. Closer it come, and at last, at the word, the men succeeded in getting upon it. The storm slowly subsided, and the men gained land at Eskimo Point, near Baird's Inlet, on September 29th. Here winter quarters were built, and scouts were sent to Cape Isabelia and Cape Sabine. In a few days they returned. Their report sent a thrill of horror to every heart. At Cape Isabelia and Cape Sabine were found only 1,500 rations, and from Garlington's records they learned the fate of the Proteus. Www Castle, August 16, 1884.

The Democratic Executive Committee of Virginia never did a wiser thing than when it appointed Hon. Joint Goode to canvass this section of the Stale. The reception of his speech at Roanoke convinced us of that fact, but if an incredulous individual had been present to-day to witness the enthusiasm he clicited from these hardy mountaineers and true Democrats, their doubts would have been set at rest. He arrived at New Castle a little state that was the true Democrats, their doubts would have been set at

before noon, and at 14 o'clock began a speech that was intently histened to for two hours by a large audience, the court-house being crowded, notwithstanding the notice had

To summarze, the entire speech was one that fully sustained the reputation of the distinguished speaker.

Craig is good for fully $500 Democratic majority. Many who were against us lastful are now with us, and so expressed the mselves to-day in the most unhesitating manner. One thing our friends in gallant traig should remember, and that is that good objects cannot be secured without effort, and to this end they should habor to perfect their organization. Mr. Hawkins, the efficient county chairman, has done and its doing all in his power to render the fullest success attainable, and in this he deserves not only the best efforts of his fellow-committeemen, but of the party.

Mr. Goode goes hence this evening to the Roanoke Red Sulphur Springs—where his family are sejourning—and from there to-morrow to Marion, Swyth county, to fill an engagement on Monday. These rough mountain roads seem to agree with him both physically and mentality, for after a long acquaintance we never saw him in hetter or more effective condition for the arduous work he has in hand.

For over a year the phenomena continued to exert itself, keeping the inhabitants in a continual state of excitement and anxiety. The sbocks were feit for three hundred miles about, rivers and lakes were drained, and confusion reigned until the year of the Caracas earthquake in 1812, when it suddenly ceased.

A severe shock was felt in Boston in 1755 and in many parts of the eastern States. In Boston and the surrounding country houses were burled to the ground and general sharm prevailed, much greater in fact than that created by the recent shake-up. It has been estimated that earthquakes are felt the world over once in five days. Between 1800 and 1859, 3,500 were counted.
